adventurous paths to a Good Life

LAUGHING HEART / AEGINA, GREECE

THE ODYSSEY OF INTENT

A seven-day Greek island retreat.
Six months to explore what comes next.

There are moments in life when the old answers stop being quite so convincing.

The Odyssey of Intent is a six-month journey for people at one of those moments. It begins with The Island Odyssey - seven days on Aegina to step away, look again and ask better questions. It continues with The Next Chapter - six months of coaching to turn discovery into practice.

Not a five-year plan. A clearer sense of what you want the next part of your life to be about.

WHO'S IT FOR?

For senior leaders at an inflection point.

You may be contemplating a change, facing one you didn't choose, or simply wondering whether the life that got you here is the life you want to take forward.

You don't need to know what comes next. That's rather the point.

PART ONE

THE ISLAND ODYSSEY

Seven days to step away from your life and see it differently.

A small group. A mountain villa. A Greek island. Seven days of coaching, philosophical inquiry, adventure, solitude, conversation, swimming, walking, eating and enough empty space for unexpected things to happen.

The journey moves from looking back to looking forward: from the identities and ambitions that have shaped you towards the possibilities that might shape what comes next.

DAY ONE

ARRIVAL

Leaving ordinary life behind

Arrive on Aegina. Meet your fellow travellers. Settle into the villa. Slow down.

Our first conversations explore what has brought you here and what you hope might become clearer during the week.

Then dinner. Because some of life's more important conversations are better conducted around a table than a flipchart.

THE QUESTION Why am I here now?

DAY TWO

IDENTITY

The stories we tell about ourselves

Leader. Founder. Expert. Parent. Achiever. Person-who-knows-what-they're-doing.

We accumulate identities remarkably easily. Through coaching, conversation and reflection, we explore the identities that have shaped your life - and which you might be ready to hold a little more lightly.

THE QUESTION Who have I become - and who might I be without the job title?

DAY THREE

LETTING GO

What no longer deserves to come with you?

Money. Status. Power. Pleasure. Human beings have been getting tangled up with these for rather a long time.

LAUGHING HEART

adventurous paths to a Good Life

We explore what success has given you, what it has cost you, and what you may still be pursuing simply because you became rather good at pursuing it.

The aim isn't to renounce worldly possessions and live in a barrel. It is to decide what still deserves a place in your life.

THE QUESTION What am I ready to leave behind?

LAUGHING HEART

Aegina: a place with enough beauty to distract you, and enough quiet to help you notice what the distraction was hiding.

DAY FOUR

MEMENTO MORI

The useful inconvenience of mortality

Time is finite. Most of us know this intellectually while arranging our diaries as though someone has quietly granted us an extension.

Today we look backwards as well as forwards: celebrating what deserves to be celebrated, acknowledging what has ended and considering what we would regret leaving unexplored.

THE QUESTION Knowing that time matters, what deserves mine?

DAY FIVE

THE BLANK PAGE

What might be waiting to emerge?

Having loosened our grip on the past, we turn towards possibility.

What gives you energy? What creates curiosity? What have you quietly wanted to explore but never given yourself permission to take seriously?

No premature plans. No SMART objectives. No requirement to make your ideas respectable.

THE QUESTION What might I become curious enough to try?

DAY SIX

THE GOOD LIFE

From possibility to intent

The ancient Greeks called it eudaimonia: flourishing, or living well. We are more interested in your definition.

What would a genuinely Good Life look like now - not the version you inherited or once pursued, but one appropriate to the person you have become?

Possibilities begin to become intentions. Intentions become experiments.

THE QUESTION How do I want to live the next chapter?

DAY SEVEN

THE COMPASS

Returning differently

The final day is about integration. You gather what you have discovered into a personal compass: the values, intentions and questions you want to carry home.

You choose a handful of experiments to begin once ordinary life resumes.

You probably won't leave knowing exactly what the next five years look like. You should have a much better idea which direction to walk.

THE QUESTION What will I take home - and what will I actually try?

LIFE ON THE ISLAND

The work matters. So does everything around it.

The week is deliberately spacious. Coaching and philosophical inquiry sit alongside swimming, walking, local adventures, shared meals, solitude and long conversations that don't have to end because somebody has another meeting.

Some adventures will be physical. Others intellectual, social or emotional. Aegina provides the backdrop: mountains, ancient olive groves, turquoise water, tavernas and sunsets that have been doing their thing rather successfully for several thousand years.

The common ingredient is curiosity.

PART TWO

THE NEXT CHAPTER

Six months to turn discovery into practice.

Going to a Greek island and having profound thoughts is the relatively easy bit. Then you go home.

The diary fills up. Familiar expectations return. Good intentions encounter Tuesday morning.

The Next Chapter helps what you discovered on the island survive contact with real life. Over six months, you experiment with different ways of working and living. Some will work. Some won't. Both are useful.

5 INDIVIDUAL COACHING SESSIONS

One-to-one conversations to explore the decisions, discoveries, obstacles and possibilities that emerge as you begin experimenting with change.

5 TRIAD COACHING SESSIONS

Regular conversations with two fellow participants: people who know where you started, understand what you are trying to change and are unlikely to be terribly impressed by your excuses.

YOUR ODYSSEY COMMUNITY

A private WhatsApp group keeps the conversations, provocations, discoveries and occasional encouragement going between sessions.

The Island Odyssey gives you the compass. The Next Chapter is where you learn to use it.

ONE SMALL RECOMMENDATION

Leave as much of the digital world behind as you can.

We won't confiscate your phone. But seven days without constantly discovering what everyone else thinks you should be doing can be surprisingly useful.

READY FOR THE ODYSSEY?

You don't need to arrive with the answer.

Just bring the questions - and a willingness to be surprised by your own answers.

Reserve your place on the next Odyssey of Intent.
